About the Guild

The Guild of Agricultural Journalists represents editors and journalists, broadcasters, photographers and PR/marketing specialists working in agriculture, commercial horticulture and other rural industries throughout Great Britain. Members work freelance and full time on specialist trade publications and regional newspapers, and for agencies, commercial businesses and other organisations in the rural sector.

Membership of the Guild offers the opportunity to enter a number of prestigious national and international journalism and photography awards; provides regular news of people, publications and agencies; and gives access to numerous networking and professional development opportunities through regional, national and international events.

Visit the Guild website (<http://www.gaj.org.uk/membership-benefits>) for more information or contact membership secretary Liz Snaith (liz@lizsnaithconsultants.com)
